Notes and Records of The Royal Society

Volume 59, Number 2, Pages 121–218

22 May 2005

Editorial
From Darwin and Wallace to the discovery of Invar
T. Quinn

Articles
The theory of natural selection of Alfred Russel Wallace FRS
M. Bulmer

The Oxford Biochemistry Department in wartime, 1939–45
M. G. Ord & L. A. Stocken

An unusual Nobel Prize
R. W. Cahn

President, patron, friend and lover: Charles Montagu's significance to the history of science
R. Higgitt

The critical point of CO2:N2: an experiment inspired by Notes and Records
J. Ke & M. Polskiń

Henry Cavendish: the catalyst for the chemical revolution
F. Seitz

Report
The Linnaeus Link Project
C. Broad

Book reviews

A good lecture is a tour de force... Light is a messenger: the life and science of William Lawrence Bragg, by Graeme K. Hunter, reviewed by J. M. Thomas

Travels of an artist: from Polynesia to Bengal. William Hodges, 1744–1797: the art of exploration, edited by Geoff Quilley & John Bonehill, reviewed by G. Williams

Plates from Royal Society Publications
Experiments of Henry Cavendish
T. Quinn